

Things to think about before examining a patient

The risks increase every time you answer 'No'

Do you need to do a face-to-face consultation? Could you do it remotely?

Do you and the patient both pass your pre-screening process?

Are you able to remain socially distanced throughout the consultation?

Can you avoid being face to face or having skin to skin contact if you are not social distanced?

Do you have the appropriate Personal Protective Equipment available?

Can you keep the time not social distanced (and the consultation as a whole) as short as possible?
